

April 28, 2020

Thank you for your delayed reply received on April 28th to my input on April 3rd. Unfortunately, the CDC's answer only covered one of my concerns. I believe this may be because the intake person I spoke to was unable to accept the detailed email I offered to send to her. As a result, she was clearly relying on notes she took and, further complicating the situation, when I first spoke to her she did not even know what a parking lot power sweeper was.

My other, more primary concern, is that currently open 'essential retail businesses' are not having their parking areas swept nightly. This is a serious concern given the volume of masks, gloves and other potentially infected items being left on lots. To make this concern more readily understandable, please go to the information page I have developed to outline this concern. That information is located here:

<http://www.worldsweepingpros.org/featured-articles/8213/>

It seems clear that the CDC should be requiring essential retail business locations to be swept nightly during the duration of the pandemic lockdown. As you will read, this information was among that transmitted to your CDC intake specialist, Allison. Please provide the CDC's reaction to this request, as well as the other suggestions articulated in the conversation with her on April 3rd. As you will read, the differences between what I told her and her notes on the matter amount to a game of 'telephone.' Thank you.

Sincerely,
Ranger Kidwell-Ross, M.A.
Editor, WorldSweeper.com
Executive Director, World Sweeping Association